

BULLDOZERFAITH
LIVING LIFE IN THE SPIRIT

CROSSING POINT

GLOBAL COMMUNITY

JANUARY 2021

JANUARY HIGHLIGHTS

At the start of January 2021, we were coming to the end of our 40 days of prayer, pressing in to see Yeshua working within our lives. It was great to hear the incredible testimonies of spiritual growth, healing, and deliverance as we all joined together to overcome the enemy's plans.

We prayed over BulldozerFaith and the ministry in Israel and encouraged all those participating in stepping out of the old, moving forward into the new with purpose and vision.

BulldozerFaith put down its "roots" as a ministry in the Land of Israel in the Galilee region, the same place Yeshua began His ministry.

Four years ago, the Father moved the ministry to Caesarea — where the Ruach HaKodesh's outpouring released the Gospel to the nations — for the "fruits" of the ministry to be revealed through the work of the Holy Spirit.

It's no wonder BulldozerFaith has faced so much opposition, as Kenny said, "It is an honor to minister from this part of the world and to be able to proclaim to the ends of the earth."

At the end of last year, the Father revealed the plans for Crossing Point Global Community, along with the need for us to be in covenant with Him as we move forward into this next part of the journey — the same way the Ark of the Covenant had to go before the Israelites before they could cross the Jordan River and into the Promise Land. We all have to surrender our lives, being born of the Spirit rather than flesh, and walk in the ways of Yehovah — not just by what we say, but what we do and how we live our lives!

It's time for each of us to step out and keep our faith intact by not doubting or being double-minded, know that if we believe, we will receive whatever we ask in prayer.

We have to be prepared to stand longer than any trials we are facing and not get depressed because these tribulations are another opportunity for the glory of Yehovah to manifest!

We are not called to worry about what people say against us when they come against us. We want to be a people that encourages, strengthens, stands, and unites together in the Messiah as we pray for victory and enter into the presence of Yehovah, using the Word as our anchor!

"Come follow me!" Yeshua said this phrase at different stages of the disciple's lives because His teachings brought challenges and demanded change to happen within their hearts. This is what is meant by "coming into the new," which we all have to work on throughout our walk with Yeshua.

So, what can you expect next for BulldozerFaith? Through the Ruach's leading, we are setting up the foundations of Crossing Point Global Community, which is where we will move the Intercessory Prayer Group. In the coming months, we will be setting up the new website for Crossing Point, a separate website from BulldozerFaith's base, though that site is also under remodeling.

Keep reading below as we go into more detail about the exciting new journey BulldozerFaith is moving into!

"And he answered, "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart , and with all your soul, and with all your strength, and with all your mind; and your neighbour as yourself." Luke 10.27

The vision the Father shared with me for

Crossing Point Global Community is creating a place where we can come together as one, supporting each other to grow in the Spirit in a safe, caring, and interactive online environment.

Our purpose will be to connect, pray, identify leaders to support people to grow in their calling, and recognize and encourage individuals' gifts. As a community, we want to give to the poor and needy, care for the widows and orphans, as set out for us in James 1:27 and led by the Ruach HaKodesh.

Our goals as a mission agency are to train, equip and release disciples into a broader community for them to witness and share the love of Yeshua.

This will also be a place where we will get to meet people from all over the world, ask questions about walking with Yeshua, and learn from mature believers who will encourage you on trusting in the Father, hearing the voice of the Spirit, worshipping Yeshua, and laying our lives at the feet of the Almighty!

Just as Elijah sat in the cave on Mt. Horeb, thinking that he was alone with nobody to share his faith with, some of you might also feel that you are alone. God showed Elijah that there was more in store than he could imagine, and the same goes for you. Many brothers and sisters are waiting for us to speak so they can come home! Shine your light! Be the light in the darkness, being a safe haven where they go and be directed into the Father's arms.

Kenny

CROSSING POINT GLOBAL COMMUNITY WEBSITE

Counseling, Prayer and Support

We will be seeking mature people in the faith to offer this level of support.

Discipleship Training

Will be offered as a one-on-one or a group experience with the intent to train people to be disciples in the world as described in the Scriptures. Soon, we hope to provide training manuals and workbooks that people can work through.

Fellowship and Encouragement

We fully encourage fellowship and support within the community, making isolation a problem of the past. We will also be looking for ways each of us can be a light within the communities we live in, witnessing and developing a body of Messiah in the world around us!

Mentoring and Growing in the Faith

There will be set guidelines for the theological principles that the group will adhere to.

CROSSING POINT GLOBAL COMMUNITY WEBSITE

Living Life in a Scriptural Way

Learning to live as a believer in the practical ways, being a good steward of the Word, and setting an example to those around us.

Community Giving

As a ministry, we will be looking for ways to give to the widows, orphans, poor, and needy as the Father leads.

Appointed Days

As instructed in the Scriptures, we are to keep the Spring and Fall Feasts, every Sabbath day, along with Purim and Hannukah if desired, although they are not mandated in the Torah.

We can organize online global events to fellowship with those who want to be a part of a larger community on specific feast days — this does not include Shabbat.

STUMBLING BLOCKS INTO STEPPING STONES: DOUBT

<https://inspire-truth.com>

Blog by Hannah-rose Russell

Does questioning our faith mean we were never really saved? Are we allowed to have doubts? Where are these feelings rooted? What do we do when doubt becomes a stumbling block that hinders our relationship with God?

One of the most dangerous stumbling blocks of our faith is doubt. No one is exempt from its attack, and there will come a time in everyone's faith walk where we will question God, often asking, "How can a God who claims to be love allow such evil and devastation to occur?"

Due to this internal struggle, thousands of people walk away from God each year, claiming that the answers they found were not satisfactory and that they have found zero evidence of God's existence.

There is nothing more disheartening than to hear someone, especially an influential believer, say that they no longer believe God is real. With testimonies being shared all over the world and personal experiences that are too extraordinary to question, it's shocking that so many have shrugged all of these beliefs away as coincidence or fairytale, adopting another narrative that better confirms their doubts and allows them to walk away without a single glance back.

Nevertheless, our beliefs do not come through other people's testimonies, so if we lack identity and relationship in the Messiah, doubt's grip will only tighten until it has chocked the faith right out of you.

"Consequently, faith comes from hearing the message, and the message is heard through the word about Christ." Romans 10:17

While there are many Christians who are coming forward to say that they are struggling with doubts and no longer believe in God, Joshua Harris and Marty Sampson, for example, the announcement that has remained on my mind since it's release is by the former lead singer of Hawk Nelson, Jon Steingard. With a long Instagram post that details the journey Jon has been on, he writes, "After growing up in a Christian home, being a pastor's kid, playing and singing in a Christian band, and having the word 'Christian' in front of most of the things in my life — I am now finding that I no longer believe in God... The process of getting to that sentence has been several years in the making. It didn't happen overnight or all of a sudden. It's been more like pulling on the threads of a sweater, and one day discovering that there was no more sweater left."

Reading Jon's words was heartbreaking. With each swipe that continued his explanation, I noticed two things. The first was that not once did Jon mention searching for a personal relationship with Jesus Christ / Yeshua HaMashiach outside of Christianity and the church! Every time he spoke of faith, it was under the roof of religion.

He wrote, "When you grow up in a community that holds a shared belief, and that shared belief is so incredibly central to everything, you simply adopt it. Everyone I was close to believed in God, accepted Jesus into their hearts, prayed for signs and wonders, and participated in church, youth groups, conferences, and ministry. So I did too."

While I will never tell someone to leave their congregation or that they are not saved if they call themselves a Christian, I do want to encourage you to look at your life outside of going to church and reading devotions or Bible plans.

How do you live your day-to-day life? Are you seeking the Father in all that you do and truly working on having a personal relationship with Him, or is your faith totally dependent on those around you — your pastor, friends, like-minded believers, family, etc.?

As a child to missionary parents, I was surrounded by the Bible and Jesus from conception. Our lives are all about walking in Truth and spreading the Word of God around the world. From a young age, I saw miracles, felt the Lord speak to me, and watch as people were transformed after accepting Jesus into their hearts. However, despite witnessing all of this, I went through a season of doubt.

Laying in my bed, trapped for months at a time in more pain than I could bear, I cried out to God, “Where are you?” and would wonder why He was allowing this to happen to me. In time, I learned the deeper strength He was teaching me and the path that was being paved with every step.

One of the lessons I learned through this trial was that relationship does not equal religion. I might have called myself a believer and acted as though I was spiritual, but until I fully laid my life at the Messiah’s feet and allowed Him to take control of my life, I was not truly walking in the fullness of all that I had been called to do.

I’m so thankful to have parents who never shoved their beliefs down my throat; instead, they encouraged me to pursue the Father for myself. When I have questions, they’re always there to answer, though, most of the time, it’s only half-answers so that I can seek the rest for myself.

This brings me to the second thing Jon mentioned in his post. Talking with his father-in-law, a pastor, one day, Jon asked about a certain passage of Scripture, and its validity to today’s culture. Rather than responding with language that Jon could understand, his father-in-law began by telling him that he would need to study the original Greek to understand what Paul was trying to say truly.

Everyone in Jon’s circle seemed to have similar responses to his questions, creating a narrative that it was for them, the leaders and ministers of the church, to know and everybody else to just believe and not worry about as the study was too intense for mere “church members.”

Beware of becoming this person! When someone comes to you with questions about faith, do you seek the Holy Spirit for an answer, or have you memorized complicated doctrine that will probably confuse any new or maturing believer?

There is no greater way to grow doubt than to surround yourself with people who only speak of conspiracies or technicalities in the Bible, stating no personal testimonies of the Holy Spirit’s work in their lives.

Biblical doctrine is important, but it should never be the foundation of our faith. When someone is asking about the reality of God, they’re not asking for a chronological understanding of the Aramaic, Greek, or Hebrew language; they are seeking encouragement to build their identity and foundation, growing closer to God with mentors who can guide them along the right path!

Yes, Yeshua reprimanded Peter for doubting (Matthew 14:31), and James 1:5-8 speaks about those having doubts not entering the Kingdom of Heaven; but, I want to let you know that this does not mean you will be cut off from God if you are struggling to believe in His Truth while seeking Him and straining to hear His voice.

If that were the case, the Bible would look extremely different. “We need to doubt the doubts and believe God,” as my dad likes to say. Through our struggles, God remains the same, and when we learn to trust in Him and open our eyes to the things He’s doing within, and around us, the struggles that once held us down will become the stepping stones we need to reach the other side!

So, how can we encourage our friends or family members who are struggling with doubt?

Maybe you're also questioning God's existence and purpose for your life. You are not alone in this. There are plenty of people in the Bible who also doubted God, yet through them, He did some incredible work!

Abraham and Sarah became the parents of great nations (Genesis 17-18); Moses led the Israelites out of Egypt (Exodus 3); the Israelites were cared for, though their rebellion and doubt did cause their generation to miss entering the Promised Land (Exodus-Joshua); Gideon helped bring victory over the Midianites (Judges 6); Martha watched her brother be raised from the dead and was one of Yeshua's disciples (John 11). The list could go on, but we can't move one without mentioning Joshua and Caleb (Numbers 13). They saw the same land as the other ten spies, yet doubt did not have a hold on them, though they were surrounded by men who questioned God's promise to the Israelites.

"And without faith it is impossible to please God, because anyone who comes to him must believe that he exists and that he rewards those who earnestly seek him." Hebrews 11:6

I have never been so sure of the Father's existence! By letting go of expectations and surrendering my life to be used for the Kingdom of Heaven, I now have a new, more fulfilling purpose. I am not the person I used to be. I'm no longer the lukewarm believer who would tell people that she loves Jesus one minute and the next would go off to do her own thing, making excuses when someone would question if her decisions pleased God. How did I get to this place? Through trust, prayer, faith, dying to my flesh, and a lot of mediation and discussion!

It's time to stop being ashamed of our doubts and struggles and begin to share them with those around us (God especially). If you feel like you are not getting answers or hearing static when you talk to God, I encourage you not to give up. Sometimes, it takes sitting in the silence and letting go of all we know to understand who our Savior is.

Use the questions below to dig deeper into where your doubt is rooted or as a tool to begin conversations with those around you. I will be praying that doubt will not win and that God will reveal Himself to you in a way that will shake your world, transforming the person you thought you were into someone whose identity is solely planted in Yeshua!

1. Have you ever questioned if God was real? What did you find?
2. What do you base your faith on? The Word, Yeshua's love, freedom, or revelation?
3. What evidence has God shown you that He is real? Through an encounter you've had with the Spirit, healing, deliverance, or through a friend's testimony?
4. Why do you believe in God?
5. Is there something you hold onto when doubt comes?
6. When you see death, sadness, and evil in the world, how do you feel about it? Do you question or blame God when you see these things?
7. What has God done in your life that has shown you His love, presence, and truth?
8. Are there things you struggle with and continue to question God about?
9. If you are living according to the Word, do you ever wonder why blessings get taken away, and people look at you like you're the bad guy?
10. Which Bible verse encourages you when your faith waivers?
11. Name something that symbolizes your faith? Is it a parachute, a lifeline, an ornament?
12. People can speak countless words into your life, but truth with and relationship comes from seeking God for ourselves at the end of the day. How do you search for Him? How often do you seek Him?
13. What do you call yourself when people ask who you are? Do you have a title?
14. Where do you place your identity

THE VALUE OF A TESTIMONY

I think the true value of a testimony is that it opens up a window into someone else's life.

And then, it opens up a window into the Father's heart, bringing hope, encouragement, deliverance, healing, salvation, joy and peace...

Your testimony could be the answer for another.

My testimony begins thirty-one days before Sukkot when the Father put it on my heart that I must fast for the whole month. At this point in my life, there was so much growing that was happening, and I was excited — I still am — to grow some more. You see, the Father was working on my heart.

The months before September involved life-changing decisions of things I did not bother to change before in my walk.

By now, I was expecting big changes; I just did not know what.

A few days into the fast, the enemy really put the heat on with all the thoughts that were coming into my mind. In the past, I would have watched a movie or played a strategy game; but, the month before, the Father had shown me that for the last 5 years of my life, I had been worshipping those things instead of Him.

So when the attacks came hard, I had no idea how to fight them, and this time I had no way of shutting out the sexual abuse from the past.

After fellowship on Shabbat the day before, I was in my kitchen with the phone when Satan whispered that I was disgusting and dirty and the Father can never use me because I am too broken to be useful and that I would only grow up to be an abuser to my own siblings who I love and have helped raise.

When that last comment went out, I was determined never to do that, so I went to the counter and found a pain pill bottle and swallowed the pills hoping it would finish the job with no hesitation.

I decided to take my final hours on my closet floor, lying there for at least two hours. I wept, I prayed, I repented, and eventually felt worse than before because now I had to live with myself knowing I had failed at suicide.

For the next six days, I had nothing else in mind. The following Sunday, my mom planned a party to celebrate my sister's graduation from Catechism. By the end of the party, I was hoping to go home early, so I asked my mother if we could leave earlier than expected, and she agreed only if I was willing to move all the unopened soda boxes to the truck.

So one by one, I did it alone, going through an unlit part of the building and used the opportunity to pray quietly, lifting my hopes up. Believing that I was almost finished, I turned and saw a man peeing on the wall, which opened up a suppressed memory.

I loaded the last box and sat on it and broke down and begged God that if He had any love for me, He would take me home because I had no strength anymore.

Then I heard a voice say, "Lay it at His feet," so I began to pray according to those words.

Waking up early in the morning and aiming to go to the bathroom, I discovered my mom comforting my youngest brother, and it looked like he had possibly broken his hand when he fell while playing with the other children. She gave him to me so she could get ready to go to the hospital with my step-dad.

Holding him there in the living room, I decided to pray for his healing, although in my mind, I was wondering if God would listen to me after all I had done, would he heal him??

But I had to try, and so after looking around at all the Catholic images, I began to pray, "Yehovah, in the midst of these gods, glorify your Name!" My brother stopped crying, and my parents came back ready to leave and were shocked that he was no longer crying. I went back to sleep, and when I woke up, I no longer held in my soul the reproach of the past because He had healed me from it. I learned to forgive myself and just to lay it all at His feet, every mountain I come across.

As a young girl, I was once assaulted from behind, which has had a huge impact on my life in the form of fear. Even after 45 years, I am still afraid of going out alone on the street after dark and going to any lonely places during the day.

This is especially unfortunate because I have always longed to be able to walk alone and spend time with Abba Father.

Last Shabbat, I fasted and had a wonderful time in prayer, and even though I cannot say that I clearly heard the voice of the Ruach HaKodesh, I had a sudden urge to go for a walk.

With a nice warm coat, hat and scarf, I stepped outside and started praying in tongues, and walked through a small piece of the forest on a deserted path. It wasn't exactly easy, but I did it! My first "prayer walk" with my heavenly Father. HalleluYah!!

LEARNING HOW TO WAIT ON YEHOVAH

I love that sense of peace and stillness that now comes from waiting on the Lord, to wake up in the morning knowing that you are waking up in His presence, that all you have to be is still — to lay your life down, to take up His life, and to ask, “What is your will for my life today, where can I serve you in this day?”

“Cast your cares upon the Lord and He will sustain you, He will never let the righteous be shaken,”
Psalm 55:22

I love that I don't have to have the answers to all the big questions anymore, that I can come to God and know that He is my provider and protector, that no matter what He is going to ask of me, He will provide the means and the way for me to do it, even if it is strength and courage.

I love that, having been a single mother of three children and feeling the profound responsibility for my children and grandchildren, I can finally let go because God loves them even more than I do,

“He has become the Father I never had and the Husband I desired but never found.”

He promised me that He is faithful and true.

“But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as eagles, they shall run, and not be weary, and they shall walk, and not be faint.” Isaiah 40:31

Esther

Today, the 19th January 2021, I turned 55, I have a daughter, Hannah Rose, and it is a miracle that I am still on planet Earth.

Five years ago, I heard a voice that said to me, "In three days, you will lay this body down, and in three days, I will raise it up."

Three days later, I tried to take my life and was taken to hospital and put on life support as I was in a coma, and sure enough, the third afternoon, I just woke up.

That was the first step in regaining some normalcy in my life.

The following seven months were extremely difficult as my thoughts and feelings took a long time to balance out again.

I have come a long way since then and have learned to follow the Torah and learned the Hebrew names for Yehovah, and He has helped me tremendously.

I have the most darling daughter whom I love, and not only do I live for Yehovah, I also live for Hannah.

When I was seventeen, I went to see my pastor and said to him, "You've got to come into the church and pray for me that the Heavenly Father will let me meet the right man one day and that I will have a baby."

The pastor and I both went straight into the church and held hands as we sat next to each other as I said to our Heavenly Father, "If you give me a girl, I promise I will call her Hannah after Hannah who went into the temple and asked for a baby and Yehovah gave her Samuel."

Twenty-three years later, when the time came to name my baby girl, I asked my mum what I should call her, and she said to me, "Go back and pray about it."

I prayed, and the Father reminded me that I promised Him I would call my little baby after Hannah in the Bible, so I did just that!

Hannah is fifteen now, a wonderful girl, a sincere child slowly emerging into the person Yehovah has created her to be.

I am the lucky one; she is not a problem to anyone.

Brenda

Brenda is my older sister, and with her permission, I felt to share the power of God's love in her life, how He has carried her through a life living with Schizophrenia.

We are only eighteen months apart, so as children, we always played together although it was more her bossing me around; but, as I got older, I was quite the stirrer and took great pleasure in teasing her to get a reaction, which she did really well. So when she became ill around fourteen, it was frightening to watch the illness take over her mind and emotions.

At first, I just thought she was overreacting and being a highly emotional and sometimes a strange teenager because, in all fairness, that could describe many teenagers without any mental illnesses.

It wasn't until she started being admitted into the hospital and seeing her in a catatonic state that I knew it was serious.

I felt so helpless to know how to relate to her; we just had to be there and watch her decline into a dark abyss.

All my memories of those years are full of heartache, confusion, anger, and disappointment as I wished that she didn't have to be ill. Brenda often acted in crazy ways that were humiliating in front of everyone, and I know she was just trying to cope and get through each day. Even though you would get angry when she acted crazy, you also felt an overwhelming feeling of compassion seeing what she was going through every day.

My whole family has a very deep love for Brenda, probably as deep as the sadness we feel watching her suffer every day of her life. It hasn't been an easy life for any one of us, and I think we would have quickly taken turns to remove her burden if it was at all possible so she wouldn't have to carry it all by herself.

I guess, from my perspective and in my heart, my question to God is why hasn't He healed her yet?

And as I prayed before writing this, His words came to me, "My grace is sufficient for thee."

She has shared with me many times how God has protected her, especially in the darkest places; Yeshua himself has appeared in front of her to comfort and protect her.

God has given her the biggest heart for giving; she will literally give you the shirt off her back if you asked her, even if it meant getting arrested for being in public without a shirt.

I don't know how many times we have bought her lovely things, and she has given them to complete strangers just to bless them.

We've learnt not to offer the family heirlooms to her anymore because we know those things will become gifts in someone else's hands.

She is also the type of person who will sit down beside a stranger and minister the love of Yehovah like she has known them all their life, and they will open up to her in places like the bus stop knowing somehow that she cares.

I say all this because if I want to see Yeshua in the eyes of His child. I look to my sister because, even though her life was stolen from her at a very young age, Yeshua gave her His life, and it's not always the illness I see when I look at my sister, it's the love of Yeshua in her eyes.

PARTNERSHIP IN MINISTRY

Gottalife Ministries is blessed to have a growing partnership base standing with us. We want to encourage newcomers to consider partnering with BulldozerFaith, monthly or as the Ruach HaKodesh leads.

We have been serving the global community of believers for over 28 years through media, online, and traveling ministry. For us, it is not only about people listening to teachings and attending ministry events but also joining together with other like-minded people to engage in missions. Today, we are connected with a growing group of passionate believers from different nations who desire to gather in one designated online space for prayer and encouragement in the Messiah. This has inspired us to launch Crossing Point Global Community to support the calling the Father has placed on our lives and create an environment for us to unite in faith and purpose.

The positive takeaway from the events of 2020 during the Covid-19 pandemic is that we have enjoyed more frequent interaction and online fellowship. Our daily devotional times have been a great source of encouragement and faith-building as we focus on edifying and supporting many on their daily faith walk. Through BulldozerFaith, get ready for more spiritual growth and consider playing a part in our mission to develop ways to interact and build a strong faith community. Crossing Point's focus is to be a new platform developed within Bulldozerfaith as an outreach tool to share with our families and friends, bringing Yeshua's truth through the Torah and the Gospel of the Kingdom. We will be providing better access for personal ministry, prayer groups, and discipleship training to equip and operate more as a faith community where we can serve each other and function better as the body of Messiah, making a difference in others' lives.

Our direction in outreach is in three steps for ministry growth: friendship, relationship, & partnership.

1. Friendship – Outreach through caring for the needs of others and hands-on personal ministry.
2. Relationship - When we spend time together around the Word in the presence of Elohim, bringing us all to closer relationships, as a family, being one in the Messiah.
3. Partnership - When we establish mutual trust and desire unity together in outreach and fellowship, partnering becomes easy for seeking His Will and being dedicated to giving in time and finances to support the ministry.

We are prayerfully seeking Elohim to bring new partners to join us as the Spirit leads us to continue maintaining the ministry and expanding into the areas of greatest need.

Kenny is available to chat with you if you are considering supporting us in any way, and we thank you for being a part of what Yah is doing through BulldozerFaith. Please send him an email at kenny@bulldozerfaith.com, and we look forward to what YHVH has in store for 2021.
